We are getting requests from reporters (this is the second or third I have gotten) to tag along with, or send a photographer with EPA to the superfund sites. Normally, I would say this isn't a good idea, but I think that we should let them go with us, to show we are on the scene, pending that David or another media person is there to accompany them. Thoughts?

Liz, is the boat inspection of San Jacinto Waste Pits still scheduled for tomorrow? We would like to deploy a photographer, and would be grateful for your help with timing.

Thanks, Richard. We are also gathering information on drinking water and waste water systems now. For a preliminary report of drinking water systems in the affected area, statistics are reporting that 1757 systems are fully operational, 98 are partially operational and on a 'boil water' notice, 49 systems have outages, and we aren't able to get in contact with 189.
